Context

Republic Day Advertising Today

- Every brand wants to express patriotism
- Most films look and feel similar
- AI-powered live-action films are becoming increasingly common
- Differentiation is getting diluted

The challenge:

How do we stand out meaningfully without losing emotional depth?

The Opportunity

Where Liberty General Insurance Can Lead

Liberty General Insurance is not just about policies. It is about confidence, responsibility, and peace of mind. Republic Day gives us a chance to show:

- Not what freedom looks like
- But what freedom feels like when people are protected

WHY AI FILM?

Not AI for novelty. AI for purpose. Live-action AI films today:

- Look impressive
- But feel similar across brands

AI Animation allows us to:

- Build a distinct, ownable world
- Show an ideal India, not a constrained reality
- Visualise abstract benefits like peace, trust, and responsibility
- Reduce production time and execution complexity
- Stay efficient on budget without compromising scale

CONCEPT 1 - THE WORRYFREE REPUBLIC

The Insight

Freedom Is Not the Absence of Risk
Freedom Is the Presence of Protection
When people know they are covered:

- They don’t panic
- They don’t fight
- They don’t hesitate
- They act responsibly.
- They live freely.

The Idea

THE WORRYFREE REPUBLIC

Imagine an India where:

- Accidents don’t lead to chaos
- Health emergencies don’t bring fear
- Every day moments are lived with confidence
- A world where Liberty General Insurance quietly enables peace of mind. This is not fantasy.
- This is a better version of reality.

The Film

The film opens on a felt-crafted India waking up to Republic Day. The world feels soft, stitched, and protected as if the country itself has been gently cushioned. Morning light falls over familiar cities, but something is different. There is no rush. No anxiety. No chaos. Tricolour elements exist quietly within daily life in the sky, in the streets, in the people, not as symbols, but as a natural part of the environment.

As we move through the country, we begin to notice what truly defines this republic. A woman is admitted to a hospital. There is no panic, no hurried phone calls. She calmly presents her insurance card, reassured and in control.

On a city road, two cars brush against each other. Instead of anger or blame, both drivers pause, take photos, raise a claim, and move on — responsibly, peacefully. A child learns to ride a bicycle. The father watches closely, but without fear. He allows the fall, the learning, the freedom.

In a housing society, residents gather for a Republic Day flag hoisting. The mood is proud yet relaxed. People greet each other warmly. Togetherness comes without tension. Throughout the film, nothing extraordinary happens — and that is the point.

This is an India where protection allows people to act better. Where responsibility replaces panic. Where freedom is not loud, but deeply felt.

The film closes on a wide view of this felt-crafted nation.

A calm, confident republic. A country that doesn’t just celebrate independence but lives it responsibly.

Super / Voice Over:
A real republic is not just independent. It is protected.
Strong. Worry-free. Responsible.

VISUAL FLOW

Visual
A claymation-crafted India at dawn. Soft-textured cities wake up to Republic Day. Buildings, roads, trees stitched and cushioned. Tricolour tones subtly blend into the sky and environment. No rush, no chaos.

Visual
Slow movement across familiar cities and streets. Daily life begins calmly. People walk, shops open, traffic moves gently. Tricolour elements appear naturally in clothing, reflections, surroundings.

Visual
A woman being admitted to a hospital. The space feels calm and orderly. She presents her insurance card without urgency. No panic. No hurried conversations.

Visual
On a city road, two cars lightly brush. The moment pauses. Both drivers step out calmly, click photos, raise a claim on their phones, and move on peacefully.

Visual
A child learning to ride a bicycle. The child wobbles and falls. The father watches closely but does not rush. He allows the moment. Learning happens.

Visual
A housing society preparing for Republic Day flag hoisting. Residents gather. Smiles, greetings, quiet pride. Togetherness without tension.

Visual
Everyday moments across the country continue — people interacting, moving forward, living normally. Nothing dramatic happens. The calm itself becomes the hero.

CONCEPT 2 - THE SECOND BEFORE PANIC

The Insight

Panic Is the First Reaction. Protection Changes the Second One. When something goes wrong, every Indian mind goes to the same place:

- “Ab sab khatam.”
- “Itni mehnat bekaar ho jaayegi.”
- “Ab kya hoga?”

But when people know they are protected:

- Panic pauses, Decisions improve, Life moves on

That pause is freedom.

The Idea

An India where:

- Problems still exist
- Risks still appear

But people don’t collapse under them.
Because protection changes behaviour.
It creates responsibility.
It creates calm.
This is not a perfect India.
This is a prepared India.

The Film

The film opens on three ordinary Indians in different parts of the country. Different lives. Different days. Nothing extraordinary. Suddenly, time slows down. Sound drops. We enter that familiar second where the mind prepares for the worst.

A newly bought car stands parked as another vehicle skids dangerously close. The gap narrows. Everything moves in slow motion. An inner thought crosses the mind, "Abhi nayi gaadi li hai… ab toh satyanaash pakka." We cut right before the impact.

We now cut to heavy rain. Thunder. A large tree cracks and begins to fall toward a modest house. Mid-fall, time freezes. Another familiar thought, "Ek-ek paisa jod ke ghar banaya tha… sab ek pal mein chala jaayega." Again, no destruction is shown.

We now cut to a hospital corridor. Calm, not chaotic. A patient being guided inside. A family member pauses, holding a file, taking a breath. The thought is quieter here, "Bas sab theek ho jaaye."

Time resumes. Each person pauses for a moment. Straightens up. Moves forward.

A simple realisation sets in & their inner thoughts say, "Par mujhe itna tension lene ki zarurat nahi hai, mere pass to Liberty hai."

The three individuals now continue with their day, walking toward their Republic Day plans. Flags in the background. Life is moving on.

Final Voice Over: Azaadi ka matlab sirf aage badhna nahi hota, Azaadi ka matlab hota hai... bina darr ke jeena.
